two months ago and reports became current that he was suffering from some sort of throat trouble, a cancer, which caused the death of his father. This was positively denied, but reports persisted that it was doubtful whether he ever would be able to return to his post.

Mrs. Grant sent a telegram to her son, Captain Ulysses S. Grant, the third, in Washington, notifying him of his father's death. The coroner's office was formally notified of the general's death and word was received that a representative of the office would visit the hotel during the morning.

Attacks the Agitators.

"The necessity that there was for arousing our people to prevent the abuses of corporate privilege and power, and to wrest from concentrated wealth the exercise of political control, and the success that has attended such agitation among the people," he continued, "have been taken advantage of by persons, some of them sincere, some of them demagogues, and all of them with an insufficient knowledge of the necessity in the maintenance of liberty and progress, of our constitution and its guarantees, to propose changes, rather for the sake of change than with any definite plan of improving the body politic. Because courts have not manifested as quick perception of the advantages to be realized from these proposed changes, and in some instances have perhaps unduly broadened constitutions as the contributions to declare them. spoke the other night at the Fullerton Avenue Presbyterian church on "The Earthlike Planets." It would take fonly one man, he asserted, to play a game of baseball on Phobos, one of the two moons of Mars—providing, of course, that a man could live in a place which had no atmosphere.

"Our one-man team would first take the position of pitcher," said Professor Moulton, "and throw the ball in a horizontal direction. The hall would go all the way around the moon, and he would have time to get a bat. If he missed it he could take his three strikes, then throw down his bat, put on his catcher's glove, mask and protector, and catch himself out as the ball came around the fourth time.

New York Stock Market.

Wall St., New York, April 12—STOCKS—Politics and the outcome of the vote of the locomotive engineers were the weapons employed to depress the stock market today. Heaviness of the first hour was followed by acute weakness in some cases before midday and other stocks—established low prices for the week. Seliling of Missouri Pacific, which appeared to be of a liquidating character, was associated with the increased heaviness of Colorado Fuel, these two having an identity of influential interest. Hill issues felt the force of the movement, which centinued to center around Union Pacific and United States Steel, the latter losing Ils and Union Pacific lost a point. Early gains in Canadian Pacific, International Harvester and some of the specialities were largely lost, with an eratic movement in American Can.

Bonds were steady.

A further tendency was noted at the opening of today's stock market, with selling pressure on such active issues as United States Steel and Union Pacific. Various other active stocks declined fractionally, these being offset, however, by a new record price for American Can and a rise of 2 points in Canadian Pacific. Some strength was shown by Amalgamated Copper, New York Central and Erie.

Short selling provoked further recessions, some of which extended a full point. Sions, some of which extended a full point. Topeka, Kan., April 11.

Amalgamated Copper, New York Central and Erie.

Short seiling provoked further recessions, some of which extended a full point. Lowest prices of the week were recordedd in Union Pacific, Missouri Pacific and United States Steel. Coppers were firm, but later yielded with the rest.

International Harvester rose a point on announcement that the company would accede to the government's dissolution terms. After the first hour the market lapsed into duliness with a pronounced downward tendency.

The market closed weak. The last hour was characterized by weakness. The persistent selling of Union Pacific was an unfavorable influence elsewhere. Southern Pacific, American Smelting, St. Paul. Amalgamated Copper, American Sugar and American Tobacco declined from 1 to over 2 points below yesterday, with increased activity as price yielded.

(Cattle must be good. Canot use thin stuff.)
